Gordon Johndroe, Laura Bush's Press Secretary

Gordon Johndroe has been Press Secretary to the First Lady for the last three months. In this position, he coordinates the press activities for Mrs. Bush, setting up interviews and responding to questions from the media about the First Lady. Before joining Mrs. Bush's staff, Johndroe was the Press Secretary for the Department of Homeland Security. Johndroe served as an Assistant Press Secretary and as a spokesman at The White House beginning from January, 2001 until the creation of the Department of Homeland Security in January, 2003. Prior to that, he worked on the Presidential campaign of 2000 as well as the President's 1998 gubernatorial reelection.

A native of Fort Worth, Texas, he attended the University of Texas at Austin.
